What sport does Jessica most likely participate in?

Jessica nervously looked around, away from all of these people looking at her. She needed to get away from all of these people looking at her. She normally practiced in front of just her coach. But today, there were hundreds of people in the bleachers. Jessica looked at the entire crowd and saw three very familiar faces. They all had said good luck to her this morning. She was glad they were here. She looked at the bars and worried she may fall during her routine. What if she fell and everyone laughed? Jessica didn't care about first place right now. She was just focusing on holding onto the contents of her stomach.

Who do you think is telling the story?

I'm in a strange new place that I haven't been to before. There's lots of room to run around here. I used to live in a place where the humans came to visit me every day. They would just stand there and stare at me. Some would even wave at me through the glass. I'm still not sure why I moved away from there, but this place is much bigger. There are many trees and more food to hunt. My food isn't brought to me. I have to find it myself now. My favorite foods out here to eat are monkeys, deer, and birds. I have also seen a lot of animals that look just like me! They look like cats with spots. It's been so cool to be free to do whatever I want whenever I want.

Why do you think Patricia's friends were hiding inside?

Patricia wondered why her friends were giggling as they walked towards the house. They had just come home from school. Patricia felt a little sad no one had remembered what day it was for her but was excited to hang out with her friends. Her friend Kate opened the door while Jeanie told Patricia to go inside first. Confused, Patricia stepped into the house. It was hard to see. She flipped on the light switch and jumped when she heard people shout out. Her other friends were hiding inside the room holding party poppers and streamers. Patricia smiled so big that her cheeks hurt. Her friends had remembered! She ran inside and over to the kitchen where dessert was being served.
