Which sentence is the main idea?

Tigers are some of the coolest cats around and there are plenty of fun facts about them. Did you know that tigers are the largest cat species in the world? It's a good thing they live outside! Tigers are also unique because they like to swim, unlike most cats. Baby tigers start hunting with their mom at just 6 months old. When they're 18 months, they leave home and live alone.

Which sentence is the main idea?

Many people wonder how good zoos are for animals. Keeping animals locked up for people to look at doesn't seem right. However, zoos actually help animals. They can take injured animals from the wild and let them heal in a protected space. Zoos also collect a lot of useful research from their animals. This research teaches humans more about wildlife and how to help them.

Which sentence is the main idea?

Have you ever wondered why you get to play at school? Sometimes, recess can seem too good to be true. The truth is that there are many benefits of recess. You get exercise by running around and playing, which strengthens your body. You also build your social skills by talking to other kids. Finally, by getting out your energy on the playground, you're more focused in school later on.

Which sentence is the main idea?

Across the world, millions of people go to bed hungry every night. How can we help those people? There are many things you can do at home to fight world hunger. The first is to not waste food. Eat your leftovers first and clean your plate so no food gets thrown away. You can even volunteer at food pantries and hand out food to people in need. Whatever you can do to help makes a difference.
